We Caught the Next Train, and Bought the Lot

We jumped at such a chance because it's the identical line of clothing that has made our reputation. You know the manufacturers well; thousands of Washington men have worn their suits-and swear by them. They're the largest and best known makers of men's garments in Baltimore-leaders among

We've agreed that their name shall not be mentioned in connection with the advertising of such ridiculously low prices as are offered below, but you'll find this name sewed inside the pocket of every coat, together with their well-known guaranty.

"Warranted to Wear"

We've divided the Suits into two lots; the Overcoats into two lots, and you'll be given unrestricted choice at the prices mentioned below. We simply tell you the amount of value the manufacturer has actually put into these garments in naming the prices at which they were made to sell.

Louis Brandeis Tells Rivers Congress Fittest Route Should Survive.

BRYAN APPROVES AIMS

Resolutions for Appropriation Bill Are Gone Over-Students of Transportation Aid with Suggestions.

The survival of the fittest was laid down as the solution of the problem of competing railroads and water carriers by Louis D. Brandels before the National Rivers and Harbors Congress at the New Willard last night. Mr. Brandels advised the railroads last night that they do not know their own business. Their methods, he said, are lax ompared with the methods of the other ndustries, and before the transportation problem of the country is solved the carretiring Ambassador was emphatic Attacks There and in Ar- riers must systematize and determine primarily the cost of their service. When this is done they must be willing that the one that can furnish service cheapest, whether it be by rail or water, shold get the business.

Mr. Brandeis' speech was made at the eleventh annual convention of the congress. The members heard a number of students of the transportation problem during the day, and last night the organization had gotten well down to the work mapped out for it—to try and get through Congress a more experient rivers and har-Congress a more generous rivers and harbors appropriation bill than the one recently killed in the Senate filibuster.
